Dr. W. H. Egle delivered an address at the public meeting held in the Court House in the evening, under the auspices of the Soldiers' Monument Committee. The subject of his discourse was "Governor Curtin and the Centre County Soldiers in the Civil War."

Dr. Egle is one of the foremost historical authorities in the country and his knowledge of the events of the dark days from '61 to'65, acquired by active service in the rebellion and exhaustive research made it most interesting and instructive. His address was listened to by a large and appreciative audience.

All places of business in Bellefonte were closed during the afternoon and evening in order that the exercises of the day in the Union Cemetery and in the Court House in the evening might receive the co-operation and observance of all our people.

Memorial day, May 30, has become a red letter day indeed in the American calendar. More than half the states of the Union have made it by law a legal holiday. By common consent thousands upon thousands of loyal people of the land look forward to its observance with a spirit of love, tenderness and thankful appreciation which pertains to none other of the anniversaries they delight to celebrate. All our citizens being mindful of the blessings, they enjoy through the patriotism, heroism and sacrifices of our soldier dead, laid aside their business cares and pursuits during the afternoon and evening and joined together in paying a fitting tribute to the brave defenders of our common country.

The Growth of Newspapers.

The growth in the number of newspapers of the United States has been far greater than that in population. In the year 1800 there were seventeen daily newspapers and 200 weeklies published in the United States, while at the beginning of 1900 there were 2,200 dailies and 15,681 weeklies, with many semi-weeklies and tri-weeklies. A large proportion of these newspapers are published in the western states. The ratio of newspapers to inhabitants is larger in the west than it is in the east or the south. Some of the most widely circulated and influential journals in the country are found in the Mississippi Valley. One or two Americans in California started a newspaper in that locality before it became United States territory, and, of course, as soon as the locality was annexed the number increased rapidly. This civilizing and educating agency, the newspaper, has marched in the front line of the American advance in its conquest of the continent.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

—Wash day or the eclipse should have been postponed until tomorrow.

SHORT, SHARP AND SNAPPY.

Congress has stood some pretty tough citizens and would doubtless survive if Tammany forced Jim Corbett upon it.

"Havana election a farce" is a newspaper head line. Well, couldn't the same thing be said of some elections much nearer home?

The Boer envoys, in Washington, are having a much better time than the Boer troops in South Africa, although both are going toward the same object-failure.

A Georgian has killed his sweetheart's father and her brother, because they tried to persuade her not to marry him. If all lovers adopted the same tactics a great many fathers and brothers would be in danger.

Germany is said to be encouraging the raising of cattle in its South African colony, with the hope that she can thus become able to do without American beef. There are a whole lot of German products, now largely sold in the United States, that we can do without if it becomes necessary to teach Germany a trade lesson.

Rudyard Kipling is the only correspondent in South Africa who has a pass from General Roberts allowing the holder to go where he pleases; no wonder Rud. gets interesting stuff.

The Census and Persons Away From Home During June.

The count of the people in the United States will begin in all parts of the country June 1, and end in the cities two weeks later and in the rest of the country before the close of the month. The people are to be counted at their places of residence, but as many persons and families will be away from their homes during June there is some danger that such persons will not be counted. If they are not counted the locality in which they live will be misrepresented to that extent, and in some cases this misrepresentation may be enough to affect the representation in Congress of the State from which they come. Local pride and state pride, therefore, should influence all such absentees to take reasonable precautions against being omitted from enumeration in their places of residence. Such omissions are most likely to occur in the large cities where families close their homes and go elsewhere for the summer. The occurrence of the Paris exposition this year is likely to increase the number absent from the country.

In all cases of contemplated absence the head of the family is requested by the Census office to communicate with the supervisor of the district in which he lives. He is also requested to leave information regarding his answers to the questions which are to be asked with some responsible neighbor who will agree to see that it reaches the enumerator on his rounds. Such information might better be left as a memorandum in writing, as in that case it is less likely to be overlooked. The questions to which answers are desired apply primarily to the population, but also to all farms and manufacturing establishments. They are being published from time to time in the press of the country.

By taking this trouble the absent citizen will do justice to his locality and his state and materially aid the Census office in the performance of its duties.

Fortune Found Through Newspaper.

Walter Adamsom, of Durand, Mich., is heir to $4,000,000 in England, and has been roaming around the county for several years unconscious of the fact. He was lounging in the corridor of the Boody house, Toledo, when he picked up a New York newpaper and began to devour its contents. Suddenly his face lighted up and he exclaimed:

"Well, by Jove! That's my picture, and I am the Walter Adamsom advertised for!"

Adamsom says that two years ago he left New York for the west, and has drifted from place to place, so that his relatives have been unable to keep track of him.

In 1702, when Queen Anna ascended the throne John Adamson, wealthy and honorable, died in London, and his estate has been handed down until E. B. Humphreys, of New York, found that Alexander Adamsom was the only living heir and had seven children, of whom the Durand man is one. The elder Adamsom died in 1889, and the relatives have been looking for the wanderer since. Adamsom immediately left for New York to claim his vast wealth.

A VICIOUS BULL!

Makes a Fierce Attack on Mrs. Joshua F. Potter Near Centre Hall.

HER NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

Her Life Was Saved by Her Daughter, Mary Delinda, Who Pluckily Rushed to Her Aid Armed With a Pitch Fork.

SHE IS REPORTED AS MUCH BETTER.

On Tuesday Mrs. Joshua T. Potter, who resides near Centre Hall, was severely injured by a maddened short horned Jersey bull. The Centre Reporter says that the animal has had an ugly disposition for some time. On Tuesday when the lady went to the field for the cows the bull made a rush at her, but she drove him off with stones. When they reached the barn the bull again became obstreperous, but Mrs. Potter drove him into his stable with a pitch-fork. When Mrs. Potter attempted to put the chain around the animal's neck, the bull attacked her again. He struck the woman on the breast and sent her flying under the hay rack. Mrs. Potter fell close to the rack and this probably alone saved her life, for the bull, unable to strike her with his head, tried to trample her under his feet, but could scarcely reach her.

Mrs. Potter tried to get up several times but the bull always rushed viciously at her, knocking her down. She finally got upon her feet and noticing several rungs out of the hay rack tried to get through there. In this she was successful, aided of course by the vicious rushes of the bull. Her daughter, Mary Delinda, was in the gangway, and with a pitch-fork tried to fight off the maddened animal which was attacking her mother. She clubbed the bull until her mother was safely away.

By the time Mrs. Potter got safely away from the bull she was completely exhausted and almost all the clothes were torn from her person. She was assisted to the house, and Dr. Lee was summoned to dress her wounds. The left ear was almost torn off the lady, and the collar bone dislocated. Her face had several ugly cuts upon it, and her arms, legs and body were black and blue from the bruises she received from the tramplings of the bull.

Timber Men Suffering.

Clearfield Republican: Clearfield county is today suffering greatly, that is, the business interests are suffering, because we have not yet had our usual spring floods and all the timber which goes to market by way of the river is yet in Clearfield county when it should be in the booms at Williamsport or in the yards of the big mills at Marietta, Columbia, York and Camden, New Jersey.

It is not alone because we still have the timber with us that complaint goes out. We ought to have the money the timber represents. It is all or most all contracted for and the money would be in circulation in Clearfield county if the timber was delivered. Every jobber who spent the past winter in the woods is a sufferer. Most of them put all their own ready money and much that they borrowed into the operations, expecting to be reimbursed in March or April when the timber would reach market.

Not only are all the people who have money invested in the lumber in the river and creeks greatly inconvenienced, but so are the other business men who advanced supplies, etc. In fact all people in business are sufferers and a good big flood would be received with great rejoicing by everybody. Let us all get down and pray for rain.

Artistic Thimbles.

The Queen of Siam has a gold thimble made in the form of a lotus bud, with her name and the date of her marriage in tiny diamonds. It was a gift from the King. A Philadelphia woman has one that is completely incrusted with diamonds, which is said to have cost $1,000. The Princess of Wales has a thimble that is an heirloom in the royal family of Denmark. It is of gold with a design traced in blue enamel and studded with precious stones.

Sleeve Mourning Bands.

The fashion of wearing a mourning band on the sleeve, that had its origin in England, has recently grown so rapidly in popularity in this country that one now sees brightly dressed women using this mode in mourning dress, and only a few years ago the man who wore a mourning band on his sleeve was the most conspicuous person in view. But nowadays it creates little attention.

A Town Sold Bodily

Supreme Justice John Dean disposed of his large interests in the town of Frugality Coal and Coke company to a syndicate of gentlemen, who will operate as the Cresson and Clearfield Coal and Coke company.

Included in the deal are 10,000 acres of coal land and extensive mining operations. The town of Frugality, in which the old company owned every foot of ground and every building, passes bodily into the hands of the new concern. This includes 150 houses, one store, two churches, three schools, a large hotel and the town hall. The purchase price is said to be $1,000,000.

The officers of the new company are: Senator J. Henry Cochrane, of Williamsport, president; P. A. B. Widener, of Philadelphia, vice president; W. M. Ballard, of the law firm of Shapley & Ballard secretary and treasurer; E. L. Elkins, Thomas Dolan and P. A. B. Widener, of Philadelphia, and Senator C. L. Magee and J. L. Rhodes, of Pittsburg, compose the board of directors. P. H. Walls, president of the old company, becomes manager and selling agent of the new.

The Fool and the Copperhead.

Lewistown Free Press: Sunday Charles Bechtel and Samuel McCullough, went to Jacks creek to spend the afternoon and saw an unusually large number of snakes. Mr. Bechtel, who thought he was a snake charmer picked up two and played with them but they were not large enough to show his companion his real powers so he started to hunt a bigger one and found it, a four and a half foot copperhead. He caught it back of the neck and picked it up, but his hold was too far back, and the snake burried his fangs in his finger. He made wild efforts to shake the reptile loose and finally succeeded but it went for him again and struck him on the leg. McCullough came to his assistance and killed the snake before it would loose its hold. Bechtel was brought up to town in a hurry and Dr. Parcels cauterized and dressed his wounds.

Threw Her Baby in a Reservoir.

A few days ago the body of an infant was found in a water tank at Tyler, near Benezette. Friday at Penfield Eva Celinski, wife of Michael Celinski, confessed to the authorities that she is the mother of the infant boy, which was found in a small reservoir there. She came there from Poland a few weeks ago on money sent her by Celinski, and they were married. She says the child was born dead on May 15, and that to avoid the displeasure of her husband she concealed the infant at home for a time and then placed it in the reservoir. She was taken to Clearfield for a hearing before Judge Gordon.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

From Our Regular Correspondent at the Nations Capitol.

INTERESTING ITEMS OF NEWS.

President McKinley Takes Part in Memorial Day Program at Antietam—Clark and Maginnis of Montana are Old Time Rivals.

DEMOCRATIC GIFT TO SUGAR TRUST.

(From our regular correspondent.)

Senator Allison, Chairman of the Senate Appropriation Committee, would be glad to see Congress adjourn June 6th, in accordance with the resolution adopted by the House, but he expresses doubt whether the condition of the regular appropriation bills, not yet acted upon, will permit it, and thinks it will be necessary for the Senate to amend the resolution, setting the date for adjournment a few days later.

President McKinley will return from Fort Monroe, where he went to observe the total eclipse of the sun, Tuesday, and on Memorial day he will go to Antietam to take part in the ceremonies of the day.

The democrats were greatly surprised as well as chagrined when the Republican Senators to a man, supported the resolution offered by Senator Bacon, directing the Committee on relations with Cuba, of which Senator Platt, of Conn., is Chairman, to make an investigation of all receipts and expenditures in Cuba, since the island has been under Military Government. Republican Senators were perfectly satisfied that the investigation, now being made by officials of the government would cover the matter thoroughly, making a Congressional investigation unnecessary, but they had no idea of giving the democrats the satisfaction of seeing the investigation resolution defeated,

In their anxiety to find something against the administration, the democrats made an amusing blunder. After making a sensational outcry over the refusal of the Comptroller of the Treasury to allow some accounts of the Washington City Post Office, aggregating about $900, for the fiscal year 1898, they discovered that those accounts belonged to a democratic Postmaster, who was a Cleveland holdover. Now they are saying less about it.

Old-timers in Washington, recall the fact that Mr Clark and Mr. Maginnis of Montana who are now rivals for the vacancy in the Senate from that state, one having an appointment from the acting Governor and one an appointment from the Governor, and neither having one chance in one hundred to win, were together in Washington once before as claimants to seats in the Senate. Just after Montana became a state what was known as the "rump" legislature elected Clark and Maginnis to the Senate, and they appeared in Washington to take their seats, but were never allowed to do so. They are what might be called by the superstitious senatorial hoodoos.

Hon. H. O. Weaver, Chairman of the Iowa Republican State Central Committee, who is in Washington, says that with the exception of Judge McPherson, who resigned to accept a place on the bench, the entire State delegation in the House will be re-elected and that President McKinley's majority in the state will be about 60,000. He says, the people of the state were never more prosperous or more contented.

The report of the House Ways and Means Committee against a resolution, offered by Representative Richardson of Tennessee, the democratic floor-leader, for the admission, free of duty, of sugar and molasses, and everything entering into the manufacture of sugar from Cuba and Porto Rico, shows a somewhat remarkable friendliness for the sugar trust, on the part of the democratic leader. After submitting figures in detail to back its contention, the report says "It will be seen that to place these commodities on the free list would if the same amount of sugar and molasses should be imported during the year beginning July 1, 1900, and running forward, give to the importers of sugar and molasses something like $14,000,000. This would be a free gift from the people of the country and measures the value of these proposed yearly gifts to the sugar trust, calculated on the importations of 1899, which of course, will steadily increase from year to year. The tariff of 1897, so far as it relates to sugar and molasses, was intended to be both a revenue producer and a matter of protection to the beet sugar industry of the U. S. To now remove that protection would be a fatal blow to that valuable and growing industry, and would strip the Treasury at once of one of its most reliable sources of revenue, and the sole effect, so far as immediate and great gain to anyone is concerned, would be to hand over to a great corporation, now enjoying enormous prosperity, a degree of aid and assistance in accumulating larger wealth, that would shock the conscience of the American people." Republican speakers will not let the voters forget that this proposition to give the sugar trust $14,000,000 a year was made by the democratic leader of the House.

Hon. H. C. Payne, Wisconsin's member of the republican National Committee, who is in Washington to attend a meeting of the sub-committee, which is making arrangements for the Philadelphia Convention, says he has been in every Western state during the past two months and that in every one of them he found the republicans preparing to make a winning campaign; that the alleged republican dissatisfaction with the administration, is merely a democratic campaign myth of the kind likely to become numerous, but not dangerous, just now.

SON ATTACKS HIS FATHER.

Sunbury Young Man Subject to Periodical Spells of Insanity.

William Carvell, aged 22 years, of Sunbury, becomes metally deranged about once a year from the effects of a sunstroke, with which he was stricken when he was a boy. Wednesday night after all in the house had retired William was seized with one of his attacks and was found wandering around the house. His father led him back to bed. Yesterday morning when William arose he was in angry mood and stated that he would leave his home. His father grabbed him and told him that he must remain in the house. The son grabbed a knife and made an attempt to cut his father's throat. A struggle ensued, but neighbors rushed to the father's assistance. The crazy boy was then bound hand and foot, but he succeeded in releasing himself when he again attacked his father. Neighbors were called upon the second time, when the son was again bound, this time with a pair a handcuffs. In the struggle the son made ugly lacerations on his fathers hand and arm with his teeth.

A Unicorn Smash-up.

Bellefonte is represented at the Philadelphia Horse Show now in progress at Wissahickon Heights, Col. W. Fred Reynolds has his stable of handsome equines in attendance. The Colonel may not bring home any of the coveted prize ribbons but his throughbreds will demonstrate that Bellefonte has something in the line of horseflesh that can cut capers with the best of them. Tuesdays event in the ring included an exhibition for unicorn teams, Col. Reynold's, Jakin, Lukin and Sampson were entered in the contest and while an accident disqualified, the trio in the early stages of the competition their performance, irregular and somewhat at variance with the rules regulating the tan bark exploits, gave them a conspicuous place in Tuesdays program. The Philadelphia Press describes the event as follows:

The pole-breaking part of the program occurred early in the afternoon. The unicorn class had been tooted for, and in answer to the merry bugle call the teams came trotting into the tan-bark—one horse in front, two behind, Jakin, Lukin and Sampson, owned by Colonel W. Fred Reynolds, of Bellefonte, and who was formerly on Gov. Hastings' staff, thought that as a unicorn team they were pretty nearly fit to beat anything in the neighborhood. They were a sensitive trio, and something—maybe it was a false note struck by the band, maybe a pre-Summer fly landing on a ticklish neck—something disconcerted them.

In a second there was a riot. The leader started to do a little jumping in the air, and then varied the monotony by a series of short dashes. Growing weary of this he then instituted a ring-around-a-rosy party, and in a fine frenzy of uncontrolled horse-sense he ran around his two companions, and with the carriage as a center of attractiveness he wound his personality and the harness into a tightening coil of restless tangle.

The other two horses caught the infection of excitement, and in a twinkling, smash went the pole of the carriage to an uproarious accompaniment of feminine "oh's" from the grandstand.

Thomas Eadon, of Bellefonte, handled the ribbons over Col. Reynolds horses.

Warning Against Swindlers.

The department of state at Washington warns the public against the swindling advertisements and other publications of schemers relating to pretended estates in England and cautions the people against remitting money in view of such advertisements to any strangers under any circumstances. Upon inquiry at the department it is learned that there are no great estates unclaimed in England. It is also said at the department that there are no large deposits awaiting claimants is the bank at England.

Without a nozzle for the hose,
He tried to wet the verdant lawn;
He placed his thumb upon the end
And then he turned the water on.
A quart or two went up his sleeve,
A mighty stream went in his face—
Some water reached the grass, but he
Was the wettest thing about the place.

The worries of a weak and sick mother are only begun with the birth of her child. By day her work is constantly interrupted and at night her rest is broken by the wailing of the peevish, puny infant. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well. It lightens all the burdens of maternity, giving to mothers strength and vigor, which they impart to their children. In over thirty years of practice Dr. Pierce and his associate staff of nearly a score of physicians have treated and cured more than half a million suffering women. Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free of charge. All correspondence is strictly private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo. N. Y.

OUR PHILIPPINES TROOPS

Are Kept Busy in Scouting and in Small Engagements.

THE SKIRMISHES ALL ONE SIDED.

Many Prisoners Captured and Scores of the Enemy Killed—Gen. Funston Justified in Summarily Executing Murderous Filipinos.

Manila, May 28.—Scouting, small engagements and the capture of arms and prisoners continue daily in northern Luzon. Last week's operations by the Ninth, Twelfth, Thirty-third, Thirty-fourth and Thirty-sixth regiments resulted in the killing of 46 of the enemy. the taking of 180 prisoners and the capture of 300 rifles and a quantity of ammunition.

Col. Edward E. Hardin, with three companies of the Twenty-ninth regiment and bluejackets from the gunboat Helena, landed at Palonog, Mesbate Island, under the enemy's fire, routed the insurgents and, after an engagement lasting half an hour, occupied the town, without casualties. The insurgent commander, with 20 officers and 230 men, surrendered on May 20, giving up a hundred rifles, An impressive scene occurred on the Plaza, when the prisoners were disarmed and liberated. The islanders were found suffering from lack of food, owing to the blockade, and the American authorities are endeavoring to relieve them.

Peace reigns and no trouble is expected in Manila, although the city is crowded with refugees from the provinces, who are leaving the unprotected hamlets in order to avoid the conscription which the insurgent leaders are enforcing, as well as the robbery and outrages at the hands of roving insurgents and bandits.

The investigation of the charge against Brig. Gen. Frederick Funston of having summarily executed two natives in the province of Zambeles has resulted in a discontinuance of the proceedings. It developed the fact that Gen. Funston caught the natives in the very act of murdering bound Maccabebe, scouts, his action, under the circumstances, being regarded as justifiable.

Seamen Charged With Mutiny.

Baltimore, May 28.—Five seamen were arrested yesterday on the charge of mutiny preferred against them by Captain Voss, of the British steamship Newholm. They claim they shipped on the vessel and went aboard about noon Saturday. Later in the day the vessel sailed for Tampico. When the supper hour arrived the men allege that they were given nothing to eat but a can of tea and a few ship's biscuits. They told the captain, they assert, that they would not work unless given more substantial food. The vessel was anchored in the bay and returned yesterday with the men in irons. Captain Voss claims that the men not only refused to work, but made various threats.

Baltimore Electricians' Strike.

Baltimore, May 28.—The strike of the 300 employes of the United Railways and Electric company is still on, and last night the city was almost in total darkness. Many of the 1,400 arc lights used to light the city have not been trimmed or suplied with new carbons since the strike began, a week ago, and notwithstanding strenuous efforts made by the company to secure new men to fill the place of the striking trimmers and dynamo tenders their efforts seem to have been nullified by the efforts o fthe strikers to persuade what few new men the compnay secured to quit work and join the strikers.

NUGGETS OF NEWS.

A bright picture of the present era of prosperity in France is painted by the United Statee consul at Marseilles.

The Confederate Veterans' Reunion.

Louisville, May 28.—The tenth annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans will begin in this city Wednesday. It is expected, considered numerically, that the tenth annual reunion will surpass any of the reunions previously held, and a conservative estimate is that 150,000 visitors will be in Louisville during the week. Every arrangement has been made for entertaining such a crowd. The city is handsomely draped in bunting, the red and white of the Confederacy being most prominent, while the portraits of Confederate generals are suspended from many buildings.

Movement of the President.

President McKinley has accepted an invitation to be in Canton, July 4. Preparations have been made for a great patriotic celebration there on that day and it is not improbable that the President will be asked to make an address, The President has also accepted invitations to attend Grand Army reunions the latter part of this month and early in June. He will go to Fredericksburg May 25, to the reunion of the Society of the Army of the Potomac. He will attend the unveiling of a monument to the dead of both Confederate and Union soldiers at Antietam May 30, and on June 6 will go to Gettysburg to attend the thirty-fourth annual encampment of the Pennsylvania G. EDITORIAL.

TAMMANY is now the ice man.

HOBSON is coming home! Now then, girls, all together?

LET no Republican escape indictment, is the cry from Kentucky.

POSSIBLY the weather man is saving up a few frosts for use at Kansas City on July 4.

ADMIRAL DEWEY prefers to withhold his opinion until he sees which party is going to nominate him.

A WOMAN and a baby attended the Cincinnati convention as a Populist delegate. What will that baby grow up to be?

AGUINALDO probably thinks that it wasn't worth while dying unless he could get more flattering epitaphs than most people have awarded him.

THERE is lots of good sound sense in Senator Lodge's declaration that the Monroe Doctrine without force back of it and willingness to use it is nothing more than sound and fury.

IT is to be hoped that the Kentucky Democrats will not amend the Goebel law. The reason for this hope is that they may amend it so as to exclude those misguided persons who vote the Republican ticket from trial by jury and benefit of the clergy.

THE stories of monumental rates at Kansas City during the Democratic convention have been confirmed, and the members of the National Committee are kicking hard about it. The hotel keepers will put six men in a room, charge $5 a day each, and rent no rooms for less than four days. This means $120 for each room for the convention.

IN 1894 there were only 231,848,596 bushels of wheat retained for home consumption; in 1899 the quantity retained was 452,530,285 bushels. In 1894 there were thousands of people too poor even to buy bread. In 1899 everybody could buy bread. These two comparisons represent the different conditions of the country under Democratic and Republican administrations.

THE President has sent positive orders to Cuba to show no favor or mercy to the guilty. But at the same time, he has insisted that men be not arrested and their characters blighted, probably for life, by unwarranted arrests on mere suspicion. This is eminently proper. It is scarcely possible that any one now in Cuba can escape from the island, and nothing will be gained by placing them under arrest until something definite is known.

THE'RE AFTER HIM.

The're after me, the're after me,
To have me fined seems everyone's desire,
The're after me, the're after me,
Mine is the scalp the farmers all require.

True it is, Mr. Secretary Hamilton, they are after you. Do not hug to your hungry heart the vain delusion that the clamor for your official head comes only from a political faction opposed to the machine you represent and, alas, too faithfully serve, or from a mere handful of the Grange leaders in the State. The hundreds of resolutions of censure and condemnation of your administration of the State Department of Agriculture, passed by as many grange organizations and agricultural societies in the State, indicates very distinctly a firmly established and wide spread opposition to your retention as Secretary of Agriculture that can only be repressed by your voluntary or enforced retirement from the official position you hold but, for reasons best known to yourself, you fail most deplorably to fill.

No one believes for a moment that you will, of your own volition, resign the position you sacrificed so much to secure. It is needless for you to iterate and reiterate your intention to hold your "job." Those who are familiar with your past political convictions, who have listened to your oft repeated denunciation of Quay and Quayism, who have applauded to the echo your forcible and impressive arguments in favor of honest elections, clean politics and fidelity and integrity in public officials, know that for your present official distinction you trampled under foot the principles you once defended and upheld, and espoused the cause of those whose depraved and dishonest political intrigues you so frequently in the past made the subject of impassioned discourse, whose official corruption you denounced in private and on public occasions. You sold out to the enemy, John, and you burned your bridges behind you when you deserted from the camp of your former allies.

Keep the position for which you have paid so dearly, John; that is, keep it as long as you can. Just remember as you go along, however, that the power that made you Secretary of Agriculture can unmake you, whether you will have it so or not. If your distinguished superior, the machine-controlled Governor, discovers, and it is likely he will ere many moons, that the best interests of himself and the machine he serves demands your removal he will not hesitate to relegate you to private life. You will be offered up as a sacrifice, your past services to the machine notwithstanding, to mollify the wrath of the outraged farmers and dairymen of the State if in the judgment of the machine bosses your removal will improve the political complications growing out of the flagrant mismanagement of your department affairs.

The're after you, John, and there will be no let up until your official head pays the penalty for your sins, sins of omission rather than sins of commission.

National Cemeteries.

The earliest or the national cemeteries were established in 1861. From that year to 1895 the number grew to 83, which has not been exceeded since. A report made in 1874 by the army inspector of these places shows that there were then interred 308,331 Union soldiers. In addition, there are 7,242 citizens and 21,661 Confederate prisoners of war who share grave space with the patriotic Americans. Of the 308,331 there were 152,117 known and 119,496 unknown white dead soldiers; of colored soldiers there were 13,005 known and 20,505 unknown, and 3,208 unknown and unclassified.—Exchange.

THOSE Democrats who demand that Congress extend the civil service laws of the United States over Cuba are respectfully referred to Judge Lochren's decision—which they hailed with so much joy—alleging that Congress can legislate for no territory without extending the Constitution over it. Do they propose that we violate our pledges and annex Cuba?

CRUSADE WILL CONTINUE UNTIL OBJECT IS ATTAINED.

The monster mass meeting of the citizens of Philadelphia, held last Friday evening in the Academy of Music in that city, to denounce the attempt of Director of Public Safety English—and incidently Mayor Ashbridge—to blackmail Hon. John Wanamaker, as a means to suppress the freedom of the North American in discussing the public acts of the municipal officers of the city, is an irresistible proof of the purpose of the people of Philadelphia to call a halt on these high officials whose reprehensible official actions have brought discredit and odium upon the city and placed her to the front among the few great cities of the country in which politieal rottenness and official corruption go hand in hand in the administration of municipal government.

The uprising of the honest, conservative, law abiding, and law-respecting citizens of Philadelphia against the machine methods and code of morals employed by Mayor Ashbridge and his immediate subordinates in the management of the city government is typical of the demonstation there will be made at the polls in November by the same element of citizenship throughout the Commonwealth against the Quay-Penrose-Durham Stone-Elkin machine and its shameless usurpation of power and prostitution of official authority in the State government.

The crusade against political debauchery and official dishonesty is on throughout the State as well as in Philadelphia. The warfare against the machine will be waged with increasing earnestness and energy until Quayism is climated from power in the Republican party of Pennsylvania and machine rule passes forever from the control and management of our municipal and State governments.

WHAT THE SUN IS.

It is 93,000,000 miles from the earth.

Its diameter is 866,000 miles.

Its bulk is 1,300,000 times more than the earth.

If all the coal on earth were set on fire it would supply the heat given out by the sun for only the tenth part of a second.

Icebergs tossed into the sun would melt instantly at the rate of 300,000,000 cubic miles of ice a second.

If you had left on a Solar Royal Blue Limited for the sun in 1640—260 years ago—you would be just about slowing up in the Grand Solar Station, and a round-trip ticket for the journey at earth railroad rates would cost you $3,000,000.

The foregoing delightfully vague information concerning Old Sol, his magnitude, distance from the earth, and heat capacity and all that, appeared in a recent issue of the Philadelphia Times. This astounding sun data is perhaps too much for the average mind to comprehend. It soars in the realm of figures beyond the grasp of human conception but it certainly establishes the fact that the sun is great and reflects in its mighty operations the Infinite power and sovereignty of the Divine Ruler, the God of the universe, the Creator of the world and the Saviour of all peoples.

IN Puerto Rico seven natives and two Americans have been appointed postmasters. This doesn't look much like carpet-bagging, does it?

REPUBLICANS are willing that the United States government should contribute to the upbuilding of an American merchant marine, so that the ships employed in doing our import and export carrying may be built by Americans in home shipyards. Democrats, on the other hand, favor the purchase of ships built abroad by aliens, chiefly the English.

IF the Boer envoys will but take the pains to investigate they will ascertain that they are being utilized for campaign material by some rather small Democratic politicians. The latter do not hesitate to take advantage of any cause that promises returns.

A DESERVED REBUKE.

The Supreme Court of the State, in a case taken up from Centre County, has given Judge Love—the Quay boss who occupies the bench in that district—a scoring which is as wholesome as it is just. The case concerned a banking house in which ex-Governor Hastings is interested, and ex-Governor Hastings is the man who has defeated the Quay outfit under Juge Love's leadership in Centre County at all recent primary elections. Judge Love's opinion in the banking house case, if sustained, would have ruined a perfectly solvent business. There are few intelligent people in Centre County who do not believe the action was due to politics. The Supreme Court in reversing Judge Love declared that his decree "does not rest on either reason or authority;" that there "is no evidence worthy the name to sustain the finding," and that the law controlling the issue was laid down seventy-five years ago. No Common Pleas Judge ever received a more staggering rebuke or one more deserved. But such must be the fate of the political Judge. No man who undertakes to boss politics from the bench is fit for judicial service, and no one on the bench or off ever went deeper into the mire of politics than Judge Love.—Phila. Press.

PROSPERITY STILL WITH US.

Business continues to be good all over the Western and Southern sections of the country, as shown by Bradstreet's returns of bank clearings:

Section.	Four Months. 1900.	1899.
Western....	$ 985,023,011	$ 867,416,591
Northwes'n	2,781,986,862	2,615,938,607
Southwes'n	883,289,239	796,782,963
Southern...	954,741,350	900,408.426
Far West'n	565,959,643	486,436,337

In every one of these sections the bank clearings have been larger this year, up to the end of April, than in the corresponding months of 1899, when the volume of business transacted in the country broke all previous records. Prosperity is still with us.

THE Democrats have overreached themselves in their assaults on the President because a few officeholders in Cuba proved dishonest. Every slanderous statement made has been disproved by the event before it was much more than uttered. The President will come out of the trouble stronger in the confidence of the people than he has ever been.

MANILA'S customs receipts last March amounted to $515,575, as compared with $243,468 in March, 1899. Under Spanish rule the largest March receipts were $279,442, in 1897; so that their record has been beaten by $216,000 for that month under American administration.

BOTH the middle-of-the-road Pops and the Bryan-annex Pops are waking up from their nightmares and making up their minds to go back to the old parties. Populism is merely a symptom of bad times, anyway, and cannot live under the present prosperity.

ADMIRAL DEWEY is getting into the political swim all right. He is giving out intimations that his health may force him to decline the nomination that the country is determined to force upon him.

THE next step toward Cuban independence will be taken by the Cubans themselves on June 16, when their first election for Cuban officials takes place. It will be controlled entirely by the Cubans themselves.

WHEN the Kansas City convention denounces trusts the Tammany delegation will ask for a special dispensation in favor of its ice combine.

INDICATIONS are that our total foreign trade for the fiscal year ending June 30 next will be $300,000,000 larger than in the year ending June 30, 1899.

KANSAS has experienced a few cyclones, but they were not of sufficient severity to offset the prosperity now raging in that State.

MEMORIAL DAY SENTIMENTS.

This is our day for all our patriotic saints and heroes.—General Anderson.

Every boy and girl of 15 should know the names and places which have made American bravery famous throughout the world.—Judge Richard Yates.

The nation that cherishes the graves of its soldiers and assembles to honor them is the nation that preserves and enlarges national life.—Benjamin Harrison.

The nation or country that can grow men of such character and such loftiness of soul that they will go down to death, if need be, for a principle can rule the world.—Webster Davis at Arlington.

PROTECTION AUGMENTS CUSTOMS REVENUES.

Customs receipts are always larger under a protective tariff than under free trade. Note the following figures:

Year.	Customs Receipts.
1892.....	$177,452,964
1895.....	131,818,530
1899.....	206,128,481

Democrats always say that protection checks the customs revenue. The facts from the Treasury Department's figures prove otherwise. When we have our home market we can afford to buy some foreign luxuries.

HEROES IN THE RANKS.

The unwritten roster of the brave bears many names of men who never rose above the ranks. All honor to them! Thousands earned a place that history has never offered to them. Brave men there were among the privates who died in battle; brave men among those whose suffering was only that of marching soldiers who never heard the minnie bullet's deadly song. Heroes all! The nation may not know their honorable names, the nation may not know their honorable deeds, but if the nation finds their honorable graves those graves will be flower decked. It is well.

THE news from the Philippines is all good, despite the efforts of the Democratic press to distort the facts into the semblance of distress. The war is nearly over and preparations are being made to send a portion of the volunteers home this fall. Meanwhile, the country can afford to let a few of the junior officers who have sickened of their jobs stay out there a little longer, despite their desire to resign. "God hates a quitter."

SECRETARY LONG and Senator Lodge have both thrown down the gauntlet to Germany. If they are mistaken in their premises the Emperor William must wonder what can be the trouble over here. If they are right—well, a hint in season is a pretty good thing. This country is willing to fight for the Monroe Doctrine whenever it is necessary, and it is just as well that William should know it.

THE Supreme Court has awarded the Governorship of Kentucky to the Democrats. This was not done, however, on the merits of the case, but merely because the court held that it had no right to go behind the acts of the legislature of a sovereign state, however wrongful they might be. The governship of Kentucky was stolen as clearly and deliberately as anything ever was.

HAWAIIAN imports from the United States last February were $1,467,953, an increase of $450,000 over the corresponding month in 1899. From all other countries the imports amounted only to $283,275, being $50,000 less than in 1899.

SENOR BUENCAMINO, a former Filipino leader, reconciled to American sovereignty, has appealed to Aguinaldo to surrender and end hostilities.

WHEN Aguinaldo receives the November election returns he will change his opinion of his American correspondents.

OUR total foreign trade this fiscal year is likely to exceed two and a quarter billion dollars.

Tired of Bryanism.

Judge M. B. Nicholson, for many years one of the Fusion leaders of Nebraska, has tired of Bryanism and "the haul down the flag" policy of the Fusion party in the State and nation. He proposes to vote for McKinley this year.

"I propose to vote for McKinley this fall, if I live so long as that," said the Judge. "I have grown weary of the course that is being pursued by the opponents of McKinley, in fact, I have been getting more and more weary ever since the Spanish-American war broke out. Before the war commenced the opposition, that is our party, were doing their best to drive McKinley into it, ready or not ready. Since the war commenced everything else has followed as a natural and logical sequence, but the Democratic managers hade done nothing but kick, kick, kick.

"There has never been a time since Dewey sailed into Manila Bay that our Government could have let go of the Philippine Islands with consistency of honor. There is neither patriotism nor common sense in the course the Democrats are pursuing now I don't propose to stay with them.

Keep Still.

Keep still. When trouble is brewing, keep still. When slander is getting on its legs, keep still. When your feelings are, hurt keep still, till you recover from your excitement at any rate. Things look differently through an unagitated eye. In a commotion once I wrote a letter and sent it, and wished I had not. In my later years I had another commotion, and wrote a long letter; but life rubbed a little sense in to me, and I kept that letter in my pocket against the day when I could look it over without agitation and without tears. I was glad I did. Less and less it seemed necessary to send it. I was not sure it would do any hurt, but in my doubtfulness I leaned to reticence, and eventually it was destroyed.

Time works wonders. Wait till you speak calmly, and then you will not need to speak, it may be. Silence is the most massive thing conceivable sometimes. It is strength in very grandeur. It is like a regiment order to stand still in the mad fury of battle. To plunge in were twice as easy.—Ex.

Transmitted from Father to Son.

It has happened but once in the history of the nation, and it may not happen again, that both father and son are given the high honor of presiding over the affairs of the nation. John Adams was the second President, and John Quincy Adams, his son, the sixth President of the United States. And only once have grandfather and grandson served in this office. William Henry Harrison was the ninth President and Benjamin Harrison, his grandson, the twenty-third President.

Hon. James Lewis, Surveyor General of Louisiana.

Pe-ru-na Drug M'f'g Co., Columbus, O.:

"Gentlemen—I have used Pe-ru-na for a short time and can cheerfully recommend it as being all you represent and wish every man who is suffering with catarrh could know of its great value. Should I at any future time have occasion to recommend a treatment of your kind, rest assured that yours will be the one. James Lewis."

Wherever the catarrh is, there is sure to be a waste of mucus. The mucus is as precious as blood. It is blood, in fact. It is blood plasma—blood with the corpuscles removed. To stop this waste, you must stop this catarrh. A course of treatment with Pe-ru-na never fails to do this.

GENERAL CASTRO'S VICTORY.

Hernandez Captured and Peace Is Now Assured in Venezuela.

New York, May 30.—Gonzales Estevez, Venezuelan consul in this city, yesterday received a dispatch from Castro announcing the capture of Hernandez, and adding "peace assured."

General Castro is not yet president of Venezuela, but, according to the consul, has become such a great favorite with the people that he will be elected president.

General Castro assumed charge of affairs last October, after Andrade fled from the country. Castro wished to take General Hernandez as a minister into his cabinet, but Hernandez said he would not accept anything short of the presidency.

Owing to their disagreement Castro imprisoned Hernandez. At the end of four months Hernandez was liberated. He at once gathered a thousand men around him and defied Castro. With his son Hernandez took to the mountains and began a war. On May 27 he was taken prisoner.

A SUCCESSFUL OPERATION.

William Rockefeller Relieved From the Dangers of Appendicitis.

New York, May 30.—William Rockefeller was operated upon Monday for appendicitis. The operation was in every respect successful and Mr. Rockefeller is recovering. His son, W. G. Rockefeller, of Greenwich, Conn., gave out the following statement last night:

"Several weeks ago Mr. Rockefeller had an attack indicating appendicitis. His physicians advised him to have an operation performed as soon as he should recover sufficiently to bear the operation. The operation was performed yesterday. It was successful in every way, and my father is now rapidly recovering.

Admiral Dewey's Western Tour.

Washington, May 30.—Admiral Dewey has arranged to leave Washington on June 5 for a trip that will carry him as far as Grand Rapids, Mich. It is a purely social trip, in response to invitations issued some months ago by the citizens of three western cities, which Admiral Dewey had accepted before the announcement of his candidacy for the presidency. The trip has no political significance. There will be no rear platform speeches nor anything else appertaining to a stumping tour. The party will visit Columbus, Detroit and Grand Rapids.

FARMERS AND BOGUS BUTTER

Grangers to Hold the Machine Responsible if Secretary Hamilton Is Not Dismissed.

OLEO SHIPMENTS STILL GOING ON.

Ex-Senator Quay Has a Big Fight With His Philadelphia Lieutenants, But the Trouble Is Patched Up Later—Machine Bosses at Outs. The Ashbridge-English Mass Meeting in Philadelphia.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Harrisburg, May 29.—The farmers and dairymen of the state are at last thoroughly awakened to the enormity of the offenses that have been perpetrated against them by state officials by means of which they have been robbed of millions of dollars annually. Behind the incompetency and corruption in the dairy and food commission at Harrisburg they discern the cloven hoof and the habiliments of the state machine of which ex-Senator Quay was the head.

And this awakened indignation is finding vent in various ways. There is every reason to believe that unless the demands of the farmers and dairymen for the removal of Secretary John Hamilton are heeded by Governor Stone the machine and the governor will be held responsible. It was reported last week that the farmers were preparing to take an active hand in politics in such an event. If Governor Stone declines to recognize the demands of the Grangers for Mr. Hamilton's removal the Grangers will make the matter a campaign issue. They will regard Hamilton as a part of the machine which the governor declines to dispense with. Every machine candidate, every man backed by the machine in every county where the Grange is established, will be marked for defeat. A leading Granger, quoted in the Philadelphia Press of last week, said:

A GRANGER'S WORDS.

"The man is foolish who attempts to charge the farmers of Pennsylvania with partizanship in demanding the removal of an official who is supposed to represent and protect the agricultural interests, and who has demonstrated that he does not represent them and is incompetent. We know no politics in this movement, beyond recognizing the fact that if Secretary Hamilton is removed his successor is bound to be a Republican and in sympathy with Governor Stone and his administration. But when it comes to the appointment of Mr. Hamilton's successor the only request that the farmers have to make is that he shall be a competent man, in whom the farmers have confidence, and whose integrity is beyond question. There are hundreds of men in the Republican party who fulfill these conditions, and there need be no difficulty in selecting one."

The Philadelphia North American, which started the crusade against the oleomargarine combine and the corrupt officials in the dairy and food department, declared as late as last Wednesday that the oleomargarine dealers, fully assured of their safety, were again flooding the Pennsylvania markets with sham butter. That more than 300,000 pounds of bogus butter had been rushed into the market and that Secretary Hamilton and his asstants were making never a move to put a stop to this trade that is plundering the farmers of the state. The North American said:

"The appointment of Secretary of Agriculture Hamilton to take charge of the dairy and food commission in place of the discredited Levi Wells was accepted by the oleo agents as the first sign of encouragement. Now they are pointing to the inactivity of Hamilton and his subordinates as an assurance that the temporary period of suspension is to be followed by a return to the "old system," under which the oleomargaine traffic was unrestricted under certain conditions.

MORE OLEOMARGARINE.

"Whatever assurance the trust agents have received the heavy shipments of oleomargarine to this city are significant. During the 20 days ending last Saturday 3,732 packages or firkins of oleo were received by freight at the terminal stations. These packages weigh from 50 to 60 pounds, so that the total consignments by freight amounted to 200,000 pounds at the lowest calculation. It is estimated by the express companies that more than 50,000 pounds arrived by express during the same period, the bulk of which was received during the last few days. The oleo factory in Camden, according to reliable information, has contributed nearly 60,000 pounds more to the grand total.

"Every pound of the oleomorgarine which is arriving to flood the market is colored in imitation of pure butter, although its sale is absolutely prohibited by law. Armed with the color clause decision of the superior court, Secretary Hamilton and his subordinates have the power to check instantly the sale of the bogus butter and to stamp out the illicit traffic.

"But not a single effective step has been taken to enforce the law, and the latest bold move of the trust agents indicates that none are expected. There is a marked similarity between the present condition of official inactivity and that which existed under the administration of Levi Wells."

That the farmers and dairymen of the state and the pure butter dealers regard the old Quay machine as the protective power of the bogus butter combination is shown in the scores of protests that are being wired and written to President McKinley asking him to reappoint Hon. James M. Beck, present United States district attorney, so that he may be able to prosecute the violators of the pure butter law. The machine has promised Mr. Beck's place to Naval Officer Holland, a member of the state machine and a leading lawyer of Montgomery county. Mr. Beck, who is a Democrat, has made a brilliant record, was the prosecutor of Ingham and Newitt, the two members of the machine involved in the notorious counterfeiting transaction. The lack of faith in the machine is voiced in the following from the Philadelphia North American of May 23, which says:

AFRAID OF THE BOSSES.

"The hand of agents of the oleo trust in seeking, through the offices of Senator Penrose and the machine, to have United States District Attorney James M. Beck immediately displaced by an appointee of the bosses, is easily recognizable. Important prosecutions, started by The North American against oleomargarine lawbreakers, are in the hands of Mr. Beck, to be conducted in the United States court.

"To save these persistent violators of the law, and many others against whom strong cases are held, Mr. Beck's instant removal is demanded by the machine.

"At a meeting of the butter dealers, held in the Produce Exchange, it was resolved to protest against Mr. Beck's removal, as the motive of the machine and the agents of the oleo trust was very apparent. The following telegram was sent to President McKinley, Attorney General Griggs and Secretary of Agriculture Wilson:

"Executive Mansion, Washington, D.C.:

"In view of the current press reports of an impending change in the United States district attorneyship in the Eastern district of Pennsylvania, the Butter and Egg Board of the Philadelphia Produce Exchange requests that you will retain in office the present incumbent, James M. Beck, until the conclusion of important oleomargarine cases awaiting trial in his court.

STONE FOR SENATOR.

Ex-Senator Quay is having great difficulty with the other members of the machine. Mr. Quay went to Avalon, N. J., to fish last week, and was visited there by Insurance Commissioner Durham, Attorney General Elkin and other machine leaders. The terrific fight in Philadelphia by which the Quay forces have been split wide open as a result of Messrs. Durham and McNichol throwing out Charles F. Kindred and Select Councilman Anderson from the councils of the machine, was taken up by Mr. Quay. He demanded that Durham make peace with Kindred and take him into the fold. This Durham refused to do, and then and there told Mr. Quay that he was done with him, and that Governor Stone was his (Durham's) candidate for the senate. There was a stirring scene and the party broke up in a fluster.

Mr. Quay evidently saw his mistake. He can ill afford to lose any friends, and so he hurried to patch up peace with Durham. A Philadelphia newspaper of Sunday last said:

"As predicted, ex-Senator Quay lost no time in patching up his quarrel with Insurance Commisioner Durham. He hurried here from Avalon yesterday morning, having sent Attorney General Elkin on ahead to make sure that Mr. Durham would meet him, and the two, after a conference, joined in denying that there were any differences between them. David H. Lane and Thomas V. Cooper were at the Hotel Walton when Mr. Quay arrived, having evidently been summoned to help bring about peace in the Quay machine household if their services were found necesary.

"Of course, after it was all over both Mr. Quay and Mr. Durham denied that there was any truth in the report that they had fallen out and the insurance commissioner insisted that he was just as anxious to see Mr. Quay reelected as he had ever seen. Despite the denials, however, the majority of politicians are of the opinion that the story which came from a leading Quayite, was correct.

"Among those who are most familiar with Mr. Quay's methods the story that he attempted to make Durham back down in his fight with Kindred could not be discounted. "That's just Quay's style," said one of them yesterday. "He has worked the game a thousand times in his efforts to take care of himself at the sacrifice of his friends, and it does not surprise me that he tried it on Durham again."

"But," added the man quoted, "things are different now. Senator Penrose is Durham's friend and so is Governor Stone, and if forced to make a choice between Quay and Durham I believe both would stand by Durham. Then, too, Quay knows that without Durham in Philadelphia he could not control two members of the legislature in the city."

MUZZLING THE PRESS.

The sensation in Philadelphia last week was the tremendous mass meeting in the great Academy of Music to demand that Mayor Ashbridge take some action with regard to the attempt of Director English to intimidate ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker and compel him by threats of alleged affidavits to order his son to stop attacking Mayor Ashbridge's administration in his newspaper, The North American. Thousands were turned away from the building, unable to get in. Prominent speakers dwelt on the outrage, which has been denounced in nearly every newspaper in the state, without regard to party, and the chairman of the meeting, Mr. Waterall, was authorized to appoint a committee to wait on the mayor and ask that he investigate this attempt of his director to stifle free speech and muzzle the newspaper press.

It is not likely that Mayor Ashbridge will do anything in the matter. He said so. But if he does not at least heed the request of the citizens gathered in public meeting, he will undoubtedly feel the weight of his action during the rest of his administration.

THE ST. LOUIS RIOTS.

Yesterday the Worst Since the Beginning of the Conflict.

THREE PERHAPS FATALLY SHOT.

Fusillades of Bullets Met the Rioters at Several Places, and It Is a Miracle That Many Were Not Instantly Killed.

St. Louis, May 30.—In a rioting sense yesterday's developments were the worst experienced since the strike on the lines of the St. Louis Transit company was inaugurated, over three weeks ago. The rioting was confined entirely to three places in the southern section of the city, and by nightfall the police records showed that fully a dozen persons had either received bullet wounds or been hurt by flying missiles. Three of those hit by bullets received what are presumably mortal wounds, and that no one was killed outright seems miraculous, considering the great number of shots exchanged by the employes of the company, the strike sympathizers and the strikers themselves.

The fatally injured are: Herman Pestchke, shot in the back; John T. Rice, shot through the chest; R. H. Stilson, Cleveland, shot through the chest. Ten others were shot and a number of others suffered injury from missiles thrown and in other ways incidental to the riotous developments of the day.

The first disturbance occurred at the intersection of Broadway and Miller street. Bonfires had been started during the night and the tracks were found encumbered with the debris by the crew of the first car out. A big crowd of men, women and children gathered at the corner and hooted and guyed the crew as it attempted to remove the obstructions. Almost immediately shooting commenced from the car. First a single shot rang out and then a perfect fusillade. The crowd scattered in every direction, and in the greatest confusion.

A schoolgirl named Dollie Mitchell screamed and fell to the sidewalk. She was borne to a place of safety and on examination it was found that she was shot through the arm and was not seriously hurt. William Grannemann, who was standing some distance from the scene of the shooting, was struck in the left knee and seriously wounded. James McCalley, who was also some distance from the crowd when the firing began, received a ball in the left leg, just above the knee. Both Grannemann's and McCalley's injuries may necessitate amputation.

There is some doubt as to the number of shots fired, but from the appearance of things surrounding the scene of its occurrence, there must have been 30 or 40. Windows were shattered, boards splintered and numerous indentations of bullets are to be found on the walls of the buildings in the vicinity.

The second riot occurred at Broadway and Pestalozzi street. At the time a large crowd was gathered at the alley through which the railroad switch of the Anheuser-Busch brewery runs. As a car passed the point the crowd first commenced to jeer at the crew and then began to pelt the car with rocks and other missiles. As soon as the car was thus assaulted the firing began. In all 25 or 30 shots were fired. The crowd began to run up the alley just as soon as the firing started. Herman Peschke, a boy employed in the bottling department of the brewery, was the first to fall, with a bullet in the small of the back. His spine is injured, causing total paralysis below the point of injury, and his recovery is thought impossible.

A few moments later George Lacosten, a man employed at the brewery, and Albert Wackwitz, a painter, fell to the ground, the former being hit by a bullet in the left arm, and the latter receiving one in the head, above the right temple.

As soon as the trouble began a riot call was rung in and 25 men were hurried to the scene. Edward J. Breser, the conductor on the car, was arrested and locked up charged with shooting Peschke.

The worst of the riotous disturbances occurred near the intersection of California avenue and Keokuk street. In this affray a non-union motorman and another employe on a car of the Transit company were probably fatally shot. The battle while it raged was fierce and in view of the large number of shots fired, estimated at 200, it is remarkable that there were not more injured. Motorman R. H. Stilson, a man imported from Cleveland, and John T. Rice, a road agent, are the dangerously wounded.

Another affair took place at the intersection of Gravois avenue and Victor street and during its progress Martin Burke, a striker, was shot in the left hip by Elmer Simmons, who was acting as guard on a Cherokee line car. A crowd of strike sympathizers at once surrounded Simmons and gave him an unmerciful beating, which might have terminated fatally had not a detachment of police arrived on the scene.

Pugilist Punches the Referee.

Chicago, May 30.—Kid McCoy was given a decision over Syracuse Tommy Ryan last night at the end of one of the prettiest six round fights ever seen here. But over the decision a free-for-all fight resulted. One clause of the agreement was that a draw should be declared were both men on their feet at the end of the sixth round. Referee Hogan said he had no such understanding, and rendered such a decision as he though just. Ryan rushed for the referee and punched him in the face, and Hogan quickly retaliated. The police stepped in and stopped further fisticuffs.

Ex-Queen Lil Hopelessly Ill.

San Francisco, May 30.—Ex-Queen Liliuokalani sailed for Honolulu yesterday on the steamer City of Pekin and is said to be hopelessly ill. She was under medical care in the east, and it is said that as soon as she became aware of the serious nature of her malady she decided to hasten home to die with her own people.

THE ARMY OF INQUISITORS.

Preliminary Work of the Twelfth Census Practically Over.

Washington, May 30.—After 15 months of preparation the preliminary work in connection with taking the twelfth census is practically over, the actual field work commencing on June 1. The work incident to the commencement of the enumeration proper has been of considerable magnitude. Nearly 300 supervisors have been selected, 52,600 enumerators, something over 2,000 special agents, a clerical force is now at work numbering over 1,000, and examinations are in force that will provide some 2,200 more. Over 15,000,000 schedules have been prepared and sent to the different parts of the United States for use in taking the enumeration and acquiring other facts in connection with the manufacturing and agricultural inquiries. In order to bring about these conditions there will have been spent on the first of June about $750,000.

On the morning of June 1 the small army of enumerators will sally forth upon the commencement of the most important census taken during the history of the United States. The preliminary work that has been undertaken is but a small part of the task that confronts the officials of the census bureau. The field work now commencing, which will involve the use of all the enumerators and special agents, consisting of nearly 45,000 men, probably will not be finished until in September. When the returns are made from this vast aggregation of information hunters the real work of the census will begin. The count of the population will be hurried through so as to complete it by the time congress convenes. The cost of the census when completed will be between $15,000,000 and $16,000,000.

GEN. DE GALLIFFET RESIGNS.

The French Minister of War Succeeded by General Andre.

Paris, May 30.—General the Marquis de Galliffet, minister of war, has resigned. It is officially announced that his successor is General Andre. In his letter to M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the premier, De Galliffet says: "I am very unwell, and my health prevents me resisting all emotions of the moment."

After deciding upon General Andre as the most suitable successor the premier telegraphed to him at Nemours, where was taking part in the maneuvers. General Andre left immediately, arriving in Paris last evening.

In spite of his plea of ill health this is not generally considered the sole reason for the resignation of General De Galliffet. Having in view the apologetic statement made by M. Waldeck-Rousseau in the chamber of deputies, there seems little doubt that he was annoyed by the word "felony" applied to an officer of the French army, although there is little difference between this language of the premier and that which General De Galliffet had himself used at a previous sitting.

Whatever the true explanation, General De Galliffet's retirement is regarded with considerable regret. Under his direction the army has benefited by quite a number of reforms, the most recent of which was his prohibition of the sale of harmful intoxicants.

House Wants an Armor Plate Factory

Washington, May 30.—The house yesterday, by a vote of 107 to 124, refused to accept the senate amendment to the naval appropriation bill relating to armor plate and adopted a modified amendment reading as follows: "That the secretary of the navy is hereby authorized to procure by contract armor of the best quality for any or all vessels above referred to, provided such contracts can be made at a price which in his judgment is reasonable and equitable, but in case he is unable to make contracts for armor under the above conditions, he is hereby authorized in his discretion, to procure a site for and to erect thereon a factory for the manufacture of armor, and the sum of $4,000,000 is hereby appropriated toward the erection of said factory." The bill now goes to the president.

More Evidence Against Stirling.

Philadelphia, May 30.—Amos Stirling, the negro who was arrested at Trenton, N. J., charged with being implicated in the murder of Professor Roy Wilson White, the young law instructor at the University of Pennsylvania, who was killed by highwaymen on the night of May 19, was last night accused by two of his negro companions with having struck the blows which resulted in Professor White's death. Charles Perry, who was arrested Monday, and to whom the possession of Professor White's watch was traced, and Henry Ivory, arrested last week, both admitted their presence when the attack was made on Professor White and both declare that Stirling struck the fatal blows.

An Appropriation For St. Louis' Fair

Washington, May 30.—A few minutes before adjournment last evening the senate added to the sundry cival appropriation bill and amendment appropriating $5,000,000 for the Louisiana purchase exposition, to be held in St. Louis in 1903, on condition that $10,000,000 in addition be raised by the exposition authorities. Because an amendment offered by him subsequently was stricken out on a point of order, Mr. Gallinger, of New Hampshire, moved to reconsider the St. Louis fair amendment and that motion now is pending. It seems likely that the motion to reconsider will not be adopted.

Fatal Collapse of Traveling Crane.

Pittsburg, May 30.—One man was killed outright, two were fatally hurt and five others badly injured last night by the collapse of a traveling crane at the plant of the Totten & Hogg iron and steel foundry. The dead man is Joseph Kwatka, and George Dodson and George Knox will die with fractured skulls.

Insanity Saved His Neck.

Washington, May 30.—Olaf Pallesen, a Swede, who several months ago murdered his wife and a 3-year-old neighbor's child, Julia Hengesbach, was yesterday found guilty, the jury fixing the penalty at imprisonment for life. Insanity was the plea set up by the defense.

STILL ROUTING FILIPINOS

Many Rebels Killed, With Small Loss to Our Troops.

PAWIN BURNED TO THE GROUND.

It Was a Rebel Stronghold and Was the Headquarters of Insurgent Gen. Callies—A Surrendered Rebel Major Inducing Comrades to Surrender

Manila, May 30.—Major Henry T. Allen, of the Forty-third infantry, while scouting from Catbalogam, Island of Samar, May 9, drove a party of insurgents from the valleys. Four Americans were killed, including Lieutenant W. H. Evans, who was slain while gallantly leading a charge against the entrenchments. Eleven of the enemy were killed and four were wounded.

The town of Caterman, Island of Samor, was attacked at midnight on April 30 by a thousand rebels, who entrenched themselves near the town over night. Captain John Cooke, of the Forty-third regiment, fought the Filipinos for six hours and afterwards buried 150 of the enemy. One American was killed and one wounded.

The hamlet of Pawin, in the province of Laguna, Island of Luzon, the headquarters of General Callies, was surrounded May 26 by three detachments of the Forty-second regiment, Thirty-seventh regiment and Eleventh cavalry. Only a few of the enemy were encountered, Callies having departed the day before. Pawin, which was manifestly a stronghold, was burned to the ground.

Captain Nordon's scouts and two companies of the Eighteenth regiment, while scouting May 12 in Western Panay, surprised a number of the enemy near Valderama and killed 35 of them. There were no casualties among the Americans, but some of them suffered from sunstroke.

The official reports announce scouting and small engagements in Panay and Cebu islands and Tayabas, Laguna, Zambales and Pangasinan provinces, resulting in 14 of the enemy being killed and many wounded. The Americans also captured 60 rifles, a Nordenfeldt gun and supplies of ammunition and destroyed a powder factory.

A rebel major who surrendered at Liscum last week has been persuading others to follow his example. Yesterday he effected the surrender of 46 men, with 55 rifles, at Tarlac, and hopes to influence more of his countrymen to do the same.

LORD ROBERTS AT JOHANNESBURG.

The British Army May Reach Pretoria by Friday Next.

London, May 30.—Lord Roberts made a victorious entry into Johannesburg at noon today, the Boers having fled during the night.

Lord Roberts' cavalry have flowed on beyond Johannesburg. A portion is understood to be at Zuurfontein, seven miles north of Johannesburg, and within 20 miles of Pretoria. Lord Roberts, although with a broken bridge at Vereeniging and a wrecked railway behind him, has somehow managed to get forward sufficient supplies for his large force.

As he has been able to do so much, it is considered possible that he will be outside of Pretoria Friday.

The Boers, who were expected to fight along the line of hills known as Klipriversberg, abandoned the eastern end of the range, near Lord Roberts' advance line, but they stood their ground on the extreme right near Van Wyck's Rust, where they met General French's turning movement. The fight continued all day, and the result is as yet mere conjecture. Probably the Boer rear guard succeeded in keeping General French off and is now in the hills northwest of Johannesburg.

London, May 30.—The Times, commenting upon the situation in China, says: "We must follow the excellent example set by the Americans, and must lose no time in telling the tsungli-yamen that unless they re-establish security for the life and property of our fellow subjects in China without delay we shall take strong measures on our part."

Rathbone Was Kind to Himself.

Havana, May 30.—Acting Director General of Posts Bristow yesterday reduced the expenses of the department $1,500 by discharging three servants of Mr. Rathbone, whose wages had been carried on the official list, a coachman at $900 a year, a gardener at $360 and a laborer at $240.

A TANGLE OF TELEGRAMS.

BY HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1899, by Charles W. Hooke.

Mr. Bolton figures in this narrative as the stony hearted parent of a beautiful daughter. Most people knew him only as I. Eugene Bolton, druggists' sundries, John street, New York.

"Bertha," said he one day to the beautiful daughter aforesaid, "I do not like George Hallett."

"Neither do I, father," replied the dutiful child. "I love him!"

This brief and pointed colloquy was the climax of many conversations. It stated a situation not at all unusual, but just as difficult for the persons involved as if it had never figured in history or romance.

George was the New York manager of Girard Freres et Cie, a Paris firm dealing in silks. It was a responsible position for a very young man, and George was making quite a bit of money. It was not his prospects to which Mr. Bolton objected; in fact, his principal accusation was that George was "one of those handsome men who always have 500 silly women chasing after them." He did not wish to see his daughter join the procession.

Besides, Mr. Bolton preferred Irving Meade, a young man who stood in the shadow of a fortune and had recently come into Mr. Bolton's employ that he might be kept from idleness while the fortune's shadow was becoming solid and substantial. Mr. Meade was not a handsome man or much pursued by sighing maidens, despite his prospective wealth. To Bertha he was a joke.

The Boltons lived in Englewood, N. J. A widowed sister of Mrs. Bolton, Mrs. Laura Merriam, resided in New York. The relations between her and the Boltons were not cordial, except as to Bertha, who was a favorite with Mrs. Merriam. As the widow was wealthy, Mr. and Mrs. Bolton viewed this intimacy with favor.

Now, it happened that occasionally Bertha would receive a telegram like this:

Meet me at Twenty-third street, Sixth avenue "L" station, up town side, 12 tomorrow.
LAURA MERRIAM.

From Mrs. Merriam? Oh, no—from George! Bertha could show these messages to her mother and use them as an excuse for going to town without the least fear of discovery, for Mrs. Bolton and Mrs. Merriam would probably not meet within six months. So Bertha and George were enabled to enjoy many luncheons together in the swellest restaurants and usually a matinee at the theater afterward.

It was on a Tuesday that George sent a message couched in the exact language of the sample given above. Bertha was not at home when the messenger boy arrived, so the telegram was given to Mrs. Bolton, who read it. She knew that it was Bertha's habit to answer these telegrams from "aunty," and she also knew that Bertha would not return home till quite late in the evening, as she was to take dinner at the house of a friend. Such being the case and as she was sure that Bertha could go to town on the following day, she sent away this reply by the boy who had brought the message:

Mrs. Merriam, 98 West —— Street, New York:
Yes. Tomorrow, 12, Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street. BERTHA.

When Mrs. Merriam received this, she did not know what "yes" meant and was inclined to regard it as an error of the telegrapher's. The important part of the message, however, was clear—Bertha wanted to meet her tomorrow at noon at Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street.

It must be understood that shopping appointments of this kind had sometimes been made between them.

When Bertha learned that her mother had answered the telegram, she was somewhat disturbed in mind. She decided to telegraph George on the following day telling him to make the time 11:45 instead of 12. Thus they could meet and George could get out of the way before Mrs. Merriam should arrive. If aunty should come, it would spoil the afternoon for Bertha and George; if she didn't, Bertha would know where to find George, who would be waiting, and an ingenious note of explanation would satisfy Mrs. Merriam's mind in regard to the telegram.

A little before 10 o'clock Wednesday forenoon Bertha entered the Englewood telegraph office, intending to send her message to George.

"I've just sent a telegram for you up to your house," said the operator. "You can see a copy of it here, though."

Bertha read as follows:

Make it 1:30 instead of 12. Unavoidable.
LAURA MERRIAM.

There was a nice situation. Was this dispatch from her aunt or from George? She puzzled over the question for several minutes and finally decided that the expression, "Make it 1:30," stamped the communication as the work of a man.

Therefore it would be useless to telegraph to George. She could meet her aunt first and George later. All things were falling out well. It was a considerable annoyance, however, to find, on reaching the railroad station, that she had just missed the train which she had intended to take. The time which she had spent in puzzling over that message had accomplished this misfortune—it was impossible to reach the appointed place by 12. Aunt Laura, in the picturesque language of the period, would be "stood up," but to meet George at 1:30 would be easy.

As the old fashioned novelists used to say, let us leave Bertha waiting in the railroad station while we follow the fortunes of her father.

When I. Eugene Bolton reached his office that morning about 9 o'clock, he discovered that he had left certain important documents at home. He needed them that day, and at first he had it in mind to telegraph his wife to send them in by Bertha.

"That's what I'll do," said he to Irving Meade, who had been present while Bolton was searching his pockets for the papers. "I'll have Bertha bring them in."

"Is Bertha coming here today?" asked the young man in a voice that betrayed his joy.

"She wasn't coming here," replied Bolton. "She was going shopping with her aunt, Mrs. Merriam."

"Mrs. Merriam telegraphed her, I suppose?" said Meade in a peculiar tone.

"Why, yes," said Bolton. "How did you know that?"

"Mr. Bolton," responded the young man impressively, "I've been on to that game for some time."

"What game?" cried the head of the firm.

"That telegram wasn't from Mrs. Merriam. It was from George Hallett!"

"Cæsar's ghost!" exclaimed Bolton. "What do you mean?"

"I know a fellow in the telegraph office in Englewood," replied Meade. "I know where the answers are addressed when those 'shopping' messages come to Bertha."

"You do, eh? Well, why didn't you tell me before?"

"I didn't feel like doing it," answered the young man. "I didn't want to get Bertha into trouble."

"There's going to be trouble if what you say is true," said Bolton. "I'll be at Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street at noon today myself."

"That is where they are to meet, is it?" said Meade.

"It's where several people are going to meet," responded Bolton, "and one of them will have a club with him."

"I think it would be very unfortunate, sir," said Meade, "if your daughter were present at such a scene. It might get into the papers."

"You're right," replied Bolton. "But what can I do?"

"Telegraph her—using Mrs. Merriam's name—not to come till later. Then go up there and meet Hallett alone."

"I'll do it!" said Bolton. And he wrote the telegram of which Bertha saw a copy, as has been already related.

Now, it happened that Bolton did not know that his wife had answered "Mrs.

"WHERE'S BERTHA? I HOPE SHE ISN'T ILL."

Merriam's" telegram on the day before. He supposed that Bertha had done so, and, believing Meade's story, he supposed that the reply had gone to Hallett.

Therefore he was very much surprised, as he got upon the elevated railroad platform at the appointed hour, to see Mrs. Merriam waiting there.

"Where's Bertha?" asked that lady, approaching him. "I hope she isn't ill?"

"N-no," said Bolton, feeling very foolish and cursing Meade in his heart, "she isn't ill, but she couldn't possibly come in today, and as I was to be here at about the hour named she asked me to tell you about it."

"I am very much disappointed," said Mrs. Merriam in an offended tone. And she turned away without another word and walked down the stairs to the street.

Bolton waited awhile to make sure that Hallett was not coming, and then he took a train down town.

"A nice fool's errand you sent me on!" he yelled at Meade when the two were again in Bolton's private office. And he told the story of his adventure.

"I'll bet you $1,000 to a cent," exclaimed Meade, "that I am not mistaken about this. She must have got your telegram and sent some sort of reply to Hallett. He'll be there at 1:30, sure."

"I'd like to know whether there is anything in this," said Bolton doubtfully.

"Go up there, and you'll see," said Meade. And he finally persuaded his employer to go.

The instant that Bolton passed the threshold Meade ran out by another way. He did not purpose to have any mistake this time. He knew that Bertha would be at the rendezvous, and he decided to make sure about Hallett. Such a scene as must result would be directly in his interest, though he would have preferred that Bertha should not be present. He feared the effect of her persuasive eloquence upon her father, who really loved her with all his heart, and would be in danger of forgiving satan himself if Bertha should plead for him. However, the chances were that Hallett's case would be settled forever.

So Meade dodged into a telegraph office and wrote out a message to Hallett in Bertha's name making the appointment at the place and hour already mentioned.

"Send this," said he to the operator in charge of the telegraph station, "and say that a young lady left it in a great hurry."

Then he gave the operator half a dollar and ran out. By good leg work he got ahead of Bolton at the Cortlandt street station of the elevated road. Arrived at Twenty-third street, he took up a position on the opposite side from that where the lovers and the irate father were to meet. He could see well enough from the windows of the waiting room across the tracks. At least that was the best place that he dared to take. He would not have missed a glimpse of the scene for any reasonable sum of money.

He had not been waiting long when Bertha appeared, looking as sweet as a rose and as happy as a bird. Five minutes, ten minutes, passed. Where was Hallett? Where was Bolton? Twelve minutes, then 13—ominous number. An up town train stopped at the station, and at the same moment a down town train rushed in, blocking the vision of the jealous lover. When he could see across the tracks again, Bertha and George were greeting each other in a manner much more than cordial.

A HAND WAS LAID UPON HIS SHOULDER.

But where was Mr. Bolton? Meade asked that question of his own tormented heart, and there was no reply.

Bertha and George began to move toward the stairs leading to the street. If they mingled with the throng below, Mr. Bolton might search for them in vain. He was helpless to avert a calamity that he himself had wrought. It was he that had sent or inspired the messages that had resulted in this meeting.

Scarcely knowing what he did, Meade ran out of the waiting room and dashed down the stairs. Reaching the street, he looked across Sixth avenue, and there were Bertha and George getting into a hansom. There was no way for him to stop them, but he rushed across the avenue as if all depended upon his haste. The hansom was well under way as he reached the foot of the "L" road station's stair on the up town side of the avenue. He leaned against the structure and gasped.

A hand was laid upon his shoulder, and he heard the voice of Mr. Bolton asking what in the name of all the fiends at once he was doing there.

"They've driven away in a hansom!" cried the excited young man. "Chase them!"

"Now, look here," said Bolton, restraining him. "If you think I'm going to believe any more of your lies, you don't know me. My daughter hasn't been here, and Hallett hasn't been here, and I can prove it. Look at this telegram. It was handed to me just as I rushed out of the office, but I forgot to open it till a half minute ago."

Meade looked and read this:

Laura telegraphs make it 1:30, same place. Bertha left before message arrived. Meet her at 12 and tell her.

It was signed by Mrs. Bolton.

"So, you see," said the stern parent, "Bertha had no reason to be here at 1:30, and, of course, Hallett wouldn't have been. Meade, I begin to see through you. You're a jealous jackass! And I had picked you for my son-in-law! The thought makes me modest. I reckon Bertha couldn't have done worse. It'll be just like me to let her suit herself after this experience, and if she wants George Hallett, why, by the jumping jingo, she shall have him!"

"WHERE MY HAT HANGS."

BY HAYDEN CARRUTH

Copyright, 1899, by Hayden Carruth.

The hot last of July sun poured down upon the dusty road along the narrow coulee which led back among the bluffs and up to the prairie stretching away to the west. And at this time, despite the metropolitan pretensions of Hawk's Landing, with its twoscore of Mississippi steamboats a day, this prairie, except for a narrow fringe along the bluff edge, was unbroken by the plow of the settler, for Minnesota was still a territory, and the civil war was a decade or more in the future.

Up the narrow trail and through the stifling dust a man was toiling. He looked rough even in that wild neighborhood and impressed the beholder at first sight as being middle aged, though closer inspection gave the idea of fewer years. He carried a dilapidated black satchel, evidently nearly empty, slung over his shoulder on a bit of pine slab, apparently a piece of driftwood, but still fresh from some up river sawmill. His coat was suspended on the end of this stick beyond the valise. He wore a rather wide leather belt, and his trousers were thrust in his boots, from the top of one of which projected the handle of a dirk knife, a utensil much affected by the steamboat men and raftsmen of the time and region, ostensibly for table and other uses of domestic peace, but really for employment in public brawls when the hand of these worthy citizens was turned against their brother men. Everything, in fact, indicated that the man plodding onward was a river man on his way to the harvest fields of the cultivated strip.

It was late in the afternoon when he reached the first house, still a little below the level of the prairie. He turned up the steep incline which led from the road and dragged himself, almost staggered, toward the house. At the door he dropped his coat and bag, sat down on the lower step and rested his head in his hands. Some one was moving about inside the house, but he made no effort to open communication.

By and by a woman, thin and perhaps 50 years of age, came to the door with a dish pan in her hands. She started slightly as she saw the figure before her, but only slightly, for figures of the character were too common.

"Well, what do you want?" she said rather sharply.

He looked up and for a moment seemed to be pulling his wits together. Then he said simply, "Work."

"Well, we want another man, but he needs to be right smart. Can you bind your station?"

"Yes—tomorrow."

"You don't 'pear as if you could today." She looked at him a moment as he sat with his head bowed. Then she added, "Have you been drinking?" He looked up quickly and for the first time gazed squarely in her eyes.

"Yes," he said.

"Thought so," was the woman's comment. "Well, rest up, and when my husband comes down from the field he'll talk with you."

The man rose and looked toward the barn. "I'll just go out and camp on the hay," he said. Then he added quickly as he drew a very black brier pipe from his pocket and laid it on the step, "I'll leave that here."

"You'd better leave your bottle here, too," said the woman.

The man started slightly, then drew an empty flask from his pocket, looked at it a moment and turned and threw it down the rocky gulch.

"If you'd done that before you emptied it, you'd 'a' been better off," said the woman. He made no reply.

"You look more intelligent than most of these fellers that come along," went on the woman candidly. "Don't you know better?"

"Yes."

"Then why don't you stop?"

"I can't."

"S'posen you try. If you stay here, we'll do what we can to help you."

The man looked at her, his manner showing more surprise than anything else. "I never had much help," he said slowly. "But it wouldn't do any good. It doesn't matter anyhow."

"It must to some one," returned the woman. "Haven't you got friends?"

"No."

"Where's your home?"

"Where my hat hangs."

He moved away toward the barn, and the woman returned to the house.

When the husband and the other men came in at supper time, the stranger was asleep on the hay. At bedtime he was still sleeping heavily, and they did not disturb him. But in the morning, early as it was, they met him coming up the rocky path from the direction of the creek, where he had made a much needed toilet. Rogers, the farmer, readily struck a bargain with him, and after breakfast he went away to the harvest field with the others. He proved an industrious workman and staid not only through the wheat cutting, but during the stacking of the grain and while the other fall work went on, after the other hands had gone and only the farmer and his son, a lad of some 18, remained. He had said that his name was Brown. Once he was away at Hawk's Landing for three days, and on his return slept in the barn for the best part of 24 hours. It was the old enemy.

* * * * * * *

October had come, and the long winding ravines when looked down upon from the bluff edges had become like valleys of fire with the red of the maple and the sumac and the glorious, flaming yellow of the trembling poplars. The thrashing of the wheat was going on everywhere. From before the sun rose in the morning until darkness came there floated from the fields the low, monotonous hum of the thrashing machines, and at night the sky glowed with reflections of the burning straw stacks. One day, somewhat earlier, perhaps in the latter part of September, a small steamboat bound north had momentarily thrust her nose into the slate colored sands of the Hawk's Landing levee. The gangplank had been hastily lowered and something carried down and left on the long windrow of driftwood. Then the steamer backed off and, with a cloud of black smoke pouring from her chimneys, plowed away up the river. The something left on the bank of bark and chips was a sick man. He was carried to a neighboring barroom to await the return of the only doctor from a visit to the country. When he came two hours later, he said the man was near unto death with the smallpox.

This was the start—small enough—but soon the disease appeared here and there in the neighborhood and began to spread, especially among the thrashing machine crews.

One day the oldest Rogers boy, who had been away down the river a few miles with a machine, came home, complaining that he was ill. The doctor took but a moment to decide that he was suffering from the dreaded disease. Then, kindly, but firmly, the doctor said that he must be taken away, so as not to endanger the rest of the family and suggested an isolated woodchopper's cabin, a half mile away, on the other side of the coulee.

"And some one will have to be found to take care of him," went on the doctor. His mother started to speak, to say that she would go, when Brown got up from his chair and took the sick boy's hand, at the same time saying:

"I'll go, if it's agree'ble to all concerned. I've had it—five years ago—down at Natchez."

In 20 minutes the doctor and the patient and the nurse rode away across the gulch and up the narrow trail to the cabin.

Many anxious days followed for the Rogers family. The doctor went every morning to visit the cabin, but no one else approached it. He brought back the report that the boy was having a severe attack, but that Brown was proving himself a good nurse. He had cleared away the underbrush about the cabin, so that the boy's mother could see it from an up stairs window, and he hung out one flag when the patient was better and two when he was worse, or was supposed to be, though he never got out the second flag.

At last the crisis was past, and the boy began slowly to improve. But it took a long while, and it was many days before the doctor was justified in making arrangements to remove the two in quarantine. One day he said:

"Brown, tomorrow I'm going to take you both back. Haven't told the boy's folks yet, because I want to surprise them. I'll be up about 10 o'clock."

When, the next morning, the doctor drove up the coulee, he noticed how bare the trees were becoming. Only the few cedars and spruces and the little red oaks, far up on the bluff sides, relieved the nakedness of the scene. The brook bounded down the gulch, foaming over the rocks and crossing the road in a noisy, impetuous way. It was chilly, and as he got farther up the coulee he met a few flakes of snow swirling down on the northwest wind.

"Bad day to bring my patient down," he muttered, "but it's time he was at home. Guess the family will give him a warm reception—and Brown too."

He turned off the main road to follow the path to the cabin. Standing in the shelter of a rock was Brown.

"I was just waiting for you, doc," said the man. "Reckon I'll go along down to the Landing. I s'pose it's been long enough, so that if I was going to have that there smallpox I would have it, ain't it?"

"TELL THE FOLKS GOODBY."

"Yes; but you said you had had it anyhow. Didn't you?"

Brown scratched a match on the rock deliberately and lit his pipe.

"I've been thinking it over, doc," he said slowly, "and I've come to the conclusion that it was something else I had—yellow fever, I believe. Tell the folks goodby." And he started down the road.

"But where are you going?" called the doctor.

"Where? Oh, anywhere. Just going—going home."

"But where's that?"

"Home? Oh—where my hat hangs!"

When Rogers reached the Landing three hours later, determined to find him and carry him home, he was told that the man he sought had taken passage on a down river steamboat. This information came first hand—from the man who had helped him up the gangplank.

The Dead Sea Falling.

The Dead sea in Palestine was formerly much larger than at present, as is shown by the old beaches stretching at various altitudes around the whole basin.

The phenomenon is not due to natural causes, but to the steadily increasing quantity of water that is taken from the Jordan river for irrigation purposes. There are other smaller streams flowing into the sea and they, too, are being utilized by the increasing number of farmers, who are diverting all the water they can get to the lands and are relieving the monotonous aspect of the former arid and lifeless region with many verdant fields.

The latest travelers say that some of the salt deposits covering the bottom of the lake may now be seen above the water in the shallower places and near the shores. This is a new aspect in addition to the deposits of salt crystals that have always been observed on the shores. But, even though this desiccation goes steadily on, it will take a long time to dry up the waters, for it requires a sounding line over 1,300 feet long to touch the bottom in the deep northern part of the basin.—New York Sun.

Millions In Car Fares.

On Manhattan Island $70,000 is spent every day in street car fares. That is a tremendous sum to be accumulated in 5 cent pieces day in and day out. But it's only a small item in the daily life of this great town. No town in the world presents such a problem in street railway transportation. Here is an island a few score rods wide and miles long, with hundreds of thousands of people living on one end of it and having business to do every day at the other end of it. Tens of thousands of workers go down town in the early hours of the morning and go back with a rush that swamps all the roads in the late afternoon. Crosstown roads there are all the way up and down the island, but they serve only as feeders for the north and south trunk lines.

But $70,000 a day is a lot of money to be spent in 5 cent car fares. That is $500,000 a week, and in a year it is more than $25,000,000.—New York Sun.

A Bold Answer.

Charles XII, king of Sweden, was once riding near Leipsic when a peasant came and knelt before him to request justice from a grenadier who had carried away his family's dinner. The king ordered the soldier to appear.

"Is it true," said he, with a stern countenance, "that you have robbed this man?"

"Sire," said the soldier, "I have not done so much injustice as your majesty has done his master. You have taken from him a kingdom, and I have taken only a turkey from this fellow."

The king gave the peasant 10 ducats and pardoned the soldier for the boldness of his witty retort, saying to him: "Remember, if I have dispossessed Augustus of a kingdom I have kept nothing to myself."

Foster's Weather Forecast.

About date of this bulletin a low or warm wave will be not far from longitude of Fargo and San Antonio moving slowly eastward and the high or cool wave will then be in longitude of Pittsburg, and Erie, Pennsylvania.

These weather disturbers will not make radical changes, but the two that will follow will be of greater force.

The highest temperature of May will cross the west of Rockies country about 23, great central valleys 25, eastern states 27, following which will come a sudden and great drop in temperature, crossing west of Rockies about 29, great central valleys 31, eastern states June 2.

This pair of atmospheric twisters will run to temperature extremes, cause general rains and the ten days previous will have been on the dry order.

The low temperature waves of 14 and 22 were calculated for eight days apart and those of 22 and 31 for nine days, the interval heretofore used being nearer six days. From this the reader will note that the forecasts are gradually coming to more specific terms and greater details.

The disturbances of the last part of May are calculated for northern latitudes and this indicates warm and dry weather for the cotton states with rains for the corn and wheat districts.

Indications are that the remainder of May weather will be favorable to all crops in a general way; enough so to depress prices.

THEY MADE A MOST DECIDED HIT

The Play a Pretty One, the Cast Effective and the Marching and Singing of the Children Was Marvelous.

A GREAT FINANCIAL SUCCESS

One of the prettiest and most attractive home talent shows ever given in Bellefonte held the boards at Garman's opera house last Thursday and Friday evenings. It was Clifton Mallory and his big company of home talent performers in that beautiful pastoral play, "Vermont."

The story of the play is very interesting, comedy and pathos are very cleverly blended and there is just enough of a plot to hold the attention of all. The cast included Hardman P. Harris, Russell Blair, Capt. H. S. Taylor, James Harris, Misses Myra Holliday, Rose Fox, Mildred Smith, Henrietta Butts, Bernice Faxon and Bernice Haupt. Each one of the performers acted their parts with perfect satisfaction and there was not a single break during the whole evening.

But it was the school children that made the big hit of the evening with their singing and dancing specialties. Almost a hundred took part in these attractive featuresProminent among the specialties were: "The Horse Race", The Rose Dance," The Naval Cadet," "The Shadow Dance," "Susie's Band" Song and Dance "My Little Red Umbrella" and last but not least the "Quietville Marching Club" of 20th, Century Politicians.

Susies band composed of nine young ladies was a novel feature that drew forth a hearty encore.

James Harris in his darky specialty made a decided hit in his song. "The 9th Battalion" assisted by the Marching Club.

Little Bernice Faxon who sang "The little Lady" in a very sweet and attractive manner, was compelled to respond to an encore.

Between the second and third act Comrade Al. Roberts of the G. A. R, gave an artistic exhibition of drumming which was loudly applauded.

Smith's orchestra furnished the music for the occasion. The opera house was crowded to the doors and a large sum was realized for the Soldiers monument fund.

COMPANY B. INSPECTED

Captain Taylor's Boys Undergo a Rigid Drill Wednesday Evening.

The annual Spring inspection of Company B. 5th Regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, took place Wednesday May 23rd at 8 p. m. in their beautiful armory corner of Spring and Lamb streets.

Company B is the pride of Bellefonte, and her people always turn out at any military function in which they are interested. Wednesday night was no exception and about six hundred people watched the soldier boys go through the difficult but beautiful military maneuvers.

The inspecting officer was Major John P. Penny, inspecting officer of the Second Brigade whose home is at Franklin, Pa He put the company through a most rigid inspection. They were drilled in manual of arms, extended order, setting up exercises, guard duty, etc, in all branches of which they acquitted themselves creditably.

Capt. W. A. Simpson and Lieutenant C. G. Winslow of Co. H, 12th Regiment. N. G. P. of Lock Haven, were present to get a few pointers as to how an inspection goes. They will soon have the ordeal to go through with themselves.

Company B can be very proud of the showing they made Wednesday night and they will no doubt take a high rank in the regiment. The officers of the company are, Captain H. S. Taylor, First Lieutenant Charles J. Taylor and Second Lieutenant Philip F. Garbrick. S. D. Gettig is First Sergeant.

The Coleville band furnished music for the occasion.

Before adjourning a committee was appointed to draw up resolutions in memory of Lieutenant George L. Jackson, formerly first lieutenant of the company, whose death occurred at Manila on the 21st inst. while serving with the 47th U. S. Volunteers. The flag on the armory was ordered to be hung at half-mast for thirty days, and the dance which was to have been held after inspection was postponed out of respect to Lieutenant Jackson's memory.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful stomach, liver and kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, loss of appetite. Try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed. For sale by F. Potts Green, druggist.

Ethics of Suicide.

"To commit suicide, is neither sensible nor moral. Life is indestructible. It is not tied to time nor space. Thus death can solely change its outward form and shorten existence in this world.

"Life has not been given us for our pleasure, but for our personal perfection, and to serve the general welfare.

"Suicide is immoral. Life has been granted men to die a natural death, and, indeed, on condition that he serves the general universal peace, and not that he only makes use of his life as long as it is personally agreeable to him.

"As long as a man still lives he can perfect himself and serve the whole community. He serves it only when he perfects himself more and more."

CITIZENS ATTENTION!

The Standard Scale and Supply Company May Move Their Plant.

PRESENT QUARTERS INADEQUATE

Increasing Demands of Trade Make Change Necessary—Great Inducements Held Out by Other Towns to Secure Works. Our Citizens Must Act Promptly to Keep Them in Bellefonte.

WHAT WILL YOU DO ABOUT IT?

Bellefonte is threatened with the loss of one of its chief industrial establishments. the Standard Scale and Supply Company; indeed, we may say without fear of contradiction, the best and most profitable in our midst. Whether the contemplated removal of this plant is generally known or not we cannot say, but we deem it our duty to bring the matter to public attention with the hope that our public-spirited citizens, our business men, will exert their best efforts to prevent the removal of this enterprising and progressive industry.

Organized about eight years ago and beginning operations on its present site in a modest and unpretentious way the Standard Scale and Supply Company has, through the indomitable perseverance and the untiring energy of its management, attained a marvelous success and a foremost rank among the scale manufacturers of the country. From a force of less than a dozen employes it has extended its labor roll to over 100 hands, for the most part skilled labor which receives the highest wages paid to any class of expert employment.

The steadily increasing volume of business necessitated from time to time an extension of their manufacturing facilities and today the plant covers every available foot of space its present site can provide; in other words, the quarters of the Scale Company, extensive and commodious as they are, are inadequate for the requirements of a constantly growing trade, and it has come to this point with the company that another location, which will furnish resources for expansion, must be secured, and if not here, elsewhere.

We know that the Messrs. Burnside, who are the managing partners in the company, are adverse, and naturally so, to leaving Bellefonte, but we also know that they will not permit sentiment and personal preference to interfere with or stand in the way of the pressing demands of their company's advancing interests. The situation in a nut-shell is simply this: A suitable and adequate location for the accommodation of the Scale works must be provided in or adjacent to Bellefonte or the company will be compelled to move its plant where its necessities can be met with and supplied.

Can Bellefonte afford to lose this institution? Are we so abundantly blessed with manufacturing industries that the loss of one or more will in nowise affect the business interests of the town? Can we hope to be successful in persuading new industries to locate here when we prove our inability to hold what we already have?

Gentlemen of the Board of Trade, there is work for you to do. The time to act is now. Do not procrastinate lest your tardy attention to such a vital business concern, such as the future of the Standard Scale and Supply Company, comes too late. Keep the company's plant here by all means if possible. It would be a calamity to lose it and a reproach against our town and people to permit its removal without an effort to retain it. It might be well to say that the company is in receipt of most generous and attractive offers from several progressive towns in Ohio and Western Pennsylvania. Pittsburg is also ready to make it advantageous for the company to take its plant there.

NOTES.

The Standard Scale and Supply Co., have decided to put $50,000 into the erection of a new plant. Will the business men of Bellefonte allow this investment to be made in another town without an effort to keep it here?

The removal of the Scale Works will involve the loss of at least $4,000 per month to Bellefonte's industrial income. Is not this an item to contend for?

The question of the removal of the Scale Works from Bellefonte was the chief topic of consideration at a recent meeting of the Stockholders in the Standard Scale and Supply Co., held in Pittsburg. William Burnside and H. C. Valentine representing Bellefonte interests succeeded in deferring final action in the matter until Bellefonte could be heard from. What are you going to do?

The export trade of the Standard Scale and Supply Co., embraces practically every country on the globe with which trade relations are possible. Their foreign shipments are steadily increasing which in its self is a testimony of the superior excellence of their product. The Standard Scale is in use in Manila, The Scale company recently filled an order for the U. S. Government and the shipment was made to the Philippines.

There is a great future before the Standard Scale and Supply Co. The phenomenal development of their plant during the past eight years presages unlimited possibilities for this progressive industry. Is Bellefonte to share it's future success or is some other town to reap the benefits that are sure to follow its march in the world of manufacture.

In the East childlessness is considered a curse from the gods. It is a pathetic sight to see some childless Hindoo mother prostrate before an idol, imploring that the curse of childlessness may be taken away.

Are we much wiser than the heathen? Thousands of childless women are not as they suppose under Nature's ban, but are suffering from a diseased condition of the delicate feminine organs. It may be debilitating drains or female weakness, and perhaps an ulcerated and inflamed condition of the parts. In any case the diseased condition must be removed and a healthy condition established before the maternal function can be fulfilled.

Many a mother acknowledges her debt to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and to its inventor Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., who invites the sick to write and consult him without charge. "Favorite Prescription" promptly allays irritation, heals ulceration, checks the debilitating drains, cures female weakness and the accompanying bearing down pains. It gives vitality and elasticity to the organs peculiary feminine, and establishes the natural conditions which make for the easy birth of healthy children.

There is nothing just as good for you as "Favorite Prescription." Don't be put off with a substitute.

"I have never written you how grateful I am to you for your help in securing good health and one of the sweetest, dearest thirteen pound girls that ever came into a home," writes Mrs. M. Vastine, of 647 South Liberty St., Galesburg, Ill. "When I wrote you about my ailments I was living in Richland, Iowa. I took six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and four vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Before I had taken four bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I was a new woman. I cannot make pen describe my heartfelt gratitude."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate the stomach, liver and bowels.

The class of 1900, Bellefonte High School; Prof. Meyers and his assistants, and the board of school directors of Bellefonte were delightfully entertained at a banquet given by Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Rees, in the parlors of Harrison's bakery on Bishop streetTuesday evening.

The banquet wasgiven in honor of thier son William Reynolds Rees, who is a member of the graduating class of the High school. The fact that G. W. Rees is just retiring from the school board after years of faithful attention to his duties as a director made the occasion all the more appropriate and led to the inviting of his fellow school directors to be present at the festive board.

After all had partaken heartily of the choice refreshments served to them, chairs were pushed back and speechmaking became the order of the evening. The principal addresses were made by Senator Heinle, D. F. Fortney Esq., and Prof. John H. Meyer and were full of good sound advice to the young graduates about to go out into the hard world to battle for themselves. The speakers also expressed their thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Rees for their generosity in providing this bountiful banquet for them.

The occasion throughout proved a most enjoyable one and will long be remembered with pleasure by those present.

Prospects Favorable for Keeping Scale Works Here.

There was a well attended meeting of Bellefonte representative business men held at the law office of John M. Dale, Esq., on Monday morning to discuss plans and proposition, to keep the Standard Scale Works in Bellefonte. While no definite action was taken, the deep interest manifested in this important question by those present, indicates that every effort will be made to induce the owners of the Scale Works to keep their plant here. Several sites are under consideration and the prospects for the purchase of a suitable location at a reasonable price are favorable, Let every business man and public spirited citizen in Bellefonte assist to the extent of his ability in this commendable project. The question of the future home of the Scale Works is one of vital importance to our business interests. The works must not be allowed to leave if we can keep them here.

HUMMEL AGAIN.

This Time He is Practicing Hanging.

A special from Williamsport to the Philadelphia Press says:

"Say, if they don't hang me in three tries, will they let me go?"

The man that asked this question today was William Hummel, who is to be hanged on June 5 for the murder of his wife and three children. He is the remarkable prisoner who has learned boxing, performing on the bars, turning handsprings and calisthenics in order to keep him alive for the gallows. And now, strangest of all, he is practicing hanging in the hope that he can cheat the hangman's noose.

"I'll tell you my secret if you keep it quiet," whispered Hummel. I've got a rope under my bed and I've been practicing hanging on the dead quiet. I fasten the rope to that bar up there and then jump off the bed. Say, do you know I can jump two feet now and not get hurt a bit. You see, by exercising the muscles of my neck I've got it so that I can hold out all right. Just before jumping off I throw my head back as far as I can, and the rope slips up against my jawbone and the back of my head. If I don't tire out before the third time I think I can pull through all right."

Hummel has become impressed with the idea that it is illegal to hang a man more than three times, and he hopes to hold out that long.

Was In Twenty-Eight Battles.

In a recent issue we noted the death of John Adam Miller, at Millheim, on 13 inst. He was a member of Company A, 148 regiment and was in twenty-eight battles. Remarkable as it seems, he came out unharmed.

Upon one occasion he lay upon the ground between two companions and a shell was seen coming direct for them. A moment later his two companions were dead on either side of him. The shell tore the knapsack from his back scattering the contents about him among which were photographs of members of his family, and these Mr. Miller gathered up.

At one time he was on a 42 days' march, and in that time he had only one night's sleep. He experienced many hardships during his life in the army.

The Sun's Eclipse.

The price of smoked glass rose rapidly in the market Monday morning on account of the almost total eclipse of the sun which occurred here for the first time in over 20 years and will not occur again for 18 years. As observed here the moon began to cross the face of the sun at 7:45 in the morning, and about five minutes past 9 eleven-twelfths of the Suns service was covered; by 10:30 all was over. Clear weather gave Bellefonters a good chance to see this phenomenon and many took advantage of it. Business was almost suspended on High and Allegheny streets and the amount of rubbering that was done was something great. From a Bellefonte stand point the eclipse was certainly a success.

Bellefonte Must not Lose the Scale Works.

A number of our prominent business men have started a movement to provide ways and means to keep the Standard Scale and Supply Co's establishment in Bellefonte. A deep interest is manifested in the enterprise and the prospects for a persuasive inducement for the company to remain here are favorable.

This is a question in which all our people should co-operate. Let there be a concerted action on the part of our citizens. Let all do what they can. Every assistance given the project, however modest will contribute to its success. Bellefonte must not lose the Scale Works if it is possible to keep them.

A Sunday Evening Wedding.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was celebrated Sunday evening at nine o'clock at the Lutheran parsonage on East Linn street. The contracting parties were C. C.
